This conference is a forum for sharing national and international models of culturally responsive services including peer services and profiling how the voices of lived experience have created new paradigms for addressing mental health and addiction challenges. It will examine zero suicide and zero coercion strategies, trauma informed responses across health and social services and showcase ways to strengthen communities including responses to promoting positive mental health and reducing homelessness across diverse cultural and global contexts.

This conference provides the opportunity to hear from national and international thought leaders and to enhance a deeper understanding of the challenges we face and potential ways forward.
